

About Centre for Science and Environment (CSE)

CSE is a public interest research and advocacy organisation working on environmental issues. The Centre, founded by noted environmental thinker and activist the late Anil Agarwal has played a pioneering role as a Southern think tank with deep knowledge of regional and global imperatives, and with crosscutting programmes on sustainable urbanisation, water management, sustainable industrialisation, energy access and climate change, among others. CSE is ranked 17th among a global listing of top environmental think tanks in the Global Go To Think Tank Index, compiled each year by the Think Tanks and Civil Societies Programme of the University of Pennsylvania in the US. More details can be found on our website: <http://www.cseindia.org>

CSE's Right To Clean Air Campaign is deeply involved with clean air and sustainable transportation issues and have been working towards raising public awareness and also engaging with policy makers to strengthen the action on air quality and transportation management in cities.
