GLOBAL CLIMATE LAW AND GOVERNANCE

REGULATIONS, POLICY AND EMERGING FRONTIERS

OCTOBER 5-16, 2026

On Zoom and Moodle

Medium of Instruction: English

Global environmental governance has moved far beyond the early frameworks that emerged from the Stockholm Conference in 1972, growing into an expansive and dynamic system of laws, institutions, negotiations and market mechanisms. Its vast domain influences policy at every level.

CSE is offering a one-stop course which introduces participants to the foundations of the global response, international frameworks alongside national action and its integration methods. It explores the legal and policy principles, ideas that define climate action with fairness and responsibility of development priorities. It widens the knowledge by showcasing the methods of engagement with climate issues at large in the current times.

The course will bridge foundational knowledge with future-facing developments, enabling learners to navigate both the established architecture and the expanding frontiers that define its trajectory, and empowering them to be participants in the global climate conversations.
