TEACHING
climate change in school

An Online Course for School Teachers' BATCH 3

August 15-September 10, 2022

Last date for submitting applications: August 8, 2022

Duration Four weeks

Load 3-4 hours per week

Language English

Mode Online; self-paced

Platform Moodle & Zoom

Centre for Science and Environment (CSE) and the Green Schools Programme (GSP) invite applications from interested school teachers (teaching classes V to XII) for the third batch of its free online course on climate change. After the successful culmination of the first and second batches, we now invite interested teachers to participate in the third batch, discuss and learn more about the biggest environmental concern of today — climate change.

Exclusively designed for school teachers, the four-week course will

- Add to and build up their understanding and knowledge of climate change, and its science, politics and impacts
- Offer them ideas, tools and methodologies for more effective classroom teaching of the subject of climate change
- Bolster their confidence to facilitate classroom discussions on the subject within their own local context
- Provide a platform for learning from the experiences of a cohort of teachers and other professionals in the field

PLEASE NOTE
There is no
participation fee

The course will include classroom briefings and presentations by subject experts, special lectures, classroom discussions, suggested online readings and audio-visual content. It will be spread over four weeks, and is designed to be self-paced so that attending teachers do not feel undue pressure.

A CSE E-Certificate of Participation will be awarded to all participants who complete the course successfully.
