Basics of news-writing: Episode 2
While writing a news story, we begin from the top and move downwards.

Movement
From most relevant to least relevant

Answer: The inverted pyramid

While editing (removing content), we begin from the bottom and move upwards.

Movement
From least relevant to most relevant
There is no hard and fast rule about the length of a sentence. Typically, a sentence should be no longer than 20 words and should contain no more than three ideas.

The longer and more convoluted the sentence, the less reader-friendly it is.
Use active voice as far as possible.

Example: Pallavi broke the table.

However, when we don’t have complete information, we use passive voice.

Example: The table was broken.
If we change this sentence to active voice, we get:

Someone broke the table. (Lacks clarity, leads to confusion)
Typically, the news value of a story is based on the following factors:

- Timeliness
- Proximity
- Impact
- Prominence
- Human interest
- Peculiarity
Pick up any news story, you will find a combination of these elements:

- Headline
- Strap/Intro
- Image/Illustration/infographic/cartoon
- Image caption
- Body of the story

A story is not complete if it does not have one of these elements.
Journalists who report stories that inform readers about relevant developments related to the environment (local as well as global) and how these impact:

1. Our planet and its resources like the land, water and air

AND

2. Its inhabitants-humans, yes but also other animals and plants.

For the children,

Of the children,

By the children.

Science of climate change, GT style
For the children: This is mainly a writing tip. Using a simple language, sharing fewer ideas (meaning instead of 3 big ideas, we identify 1 big idea and explain that) and keeping the article brief (500-600 words)

Of the children: The focus here is how climate change impacts children. For example, a story about school closures due to severe heatwave or coldwave, or extreme rainfall is more likely to connect with children.

By the children: Voices of children presenting their personal experience of their immediate environment.

Example

Days of COVID-19 confinement: How school-goers are dealing with lockdown
Let us begin our live tour of the GT website and re-cap what we’ve learnt about newswriting so far…

Rise of the mosquitoes

Scientists have mapped how rising temperatures will impact the population and distribution of mosquitoes in the world.
